The attorneys, some of which had been with the Public Defenders Office for close to 20 years, had been fired by Monahan just because they belonged to the wrong political party.

1. of or relating to ethics.
2. conforming to accepted professional standards of conduct.

Brian Monahan advised an informant, who he believed to be a prime suspect in the double homicide of two teenage girls, NOT to come forward and to keep everything to himself.

The young man was “burning” to tell the police what he knew, but instead he took Brian Monahan’s advice and a murderer remained free in the community for three more months after the double homicide of two young girls.*

We deserve an ethical judge who will be tough on crime
— NOT Brian Monahan!

The Morning Call

December 10, 1995

"Dorney, 18, said he met with Monahan in July to discuss what he knew about the June 29 shootings of his girlfriend, Mary Orlando, 15, and her best friend Jennifer Grider, 17. Dorney maintains Monahan believed he was a 'prime suspect' and told him to 'keep everything to myself'."

"I don't have a problem with a lawyer explaining options," said Edward Ohlbaum, a former Philadelphia Public Defender and a professor at Temple University School Of Law. "I do have a (personal) problem with a lawyer advising a client not to come forward."

"Bethlehem Police Commissioner John Yerk on Friday said that because of Dorney's delay in coming forward with the information, it took investigators more than five months to charge Christopher Bissey, 18, of Salisbury Township with shooting the girls at the Lookout on Bethlehem's South Side. Police charged Bissey with criminal homicide early Thursday, two days after Dorney met with detectives."
